What was the First Hookah?

The first Hookah was made from a coconut shell or gourd with a pipe, the Persians improved the Hookah, making the base of porcelain and the hose from snakeskin. It was the Persians who began to use moist tobacco and invented the tobacco tray made of bronze, which was mounted above the steam. Subsequently, the artisans began to make a Hookah out of gold, silver, crystal, inlaid with precious stones and paintings.

Through the course of the migration, the Hookah got the form and the necessary parts, now it consists of four required parts: steam, base, hose, and bowl, and a variety of additional parts.

It's believed that the Hookah completed its evolution in Turkey, but recently, due to the increased popularity in the world, designers and fans have begun to develop new hookahs, seeking new forms with the latest technology and materials.
